Opening the Vault of Time

Much has been written about anticipated events in 2012. However, history has shown that predicting future events, especially the timing of these events, is at best an imprecise art. I suggest that a major factor is that consciousness, particularly collective consciousness, has much more influence and authority over events than we currently recognise. For years, I have been greatly impressed by what qi gong masters and some others have demonstrated that measurably violates accepted theories of time and space.

The mysteries of nature, limits of human potential and the reality of our past and future integration with the cosmos are critical areas that demand close cooperation to unravel. Survival of humanity is involved.

I believe with high confidence that one of several specific seminal events that will take place in 2012 will be an unambiguous disclosure that from the most ancient times, and very specifically in the modern era, Earth and extraterrestrial (ET) cultures have been in intimate contact.

I want to address why countries have deferred to the United States on this subject, and why that is now a dysfunctional and dangerous strategy. Directly associated with this is a special role for China to play in this global and cosmic drama, and steps being taken that can lead to disclosure. The success that China will have in taking a lead in disclosure depends upon global pre-disclosure dialogue and education.

To begin, I want you to know that I am hybrid. I carry extraterrestrial DNA, some of which has yet to be switched on. If you find that to be exciting, you will be delighted to know that each of you shares that condition with me and with each other. More than one extraterrestrial culture may be involved, but the solid archaeological evidence of this comes from the Middle East in the form of thousands of clay tablets that now reside in the great museums of the world and in private collections. The brilliant work of Zecharia Sitchin with these clay tablets and other authenticated sources details the arrival of the Anunnaki from their home planet, Nibiru, and their genetic engineering that resulted in the family of man on Earth. While Nibiru is a planet in our solar system, we know from other sources that extraterrestrials from other star systems also became players in the development of humankind. These included visitors from Tau Ceti, Zeta Reticuli, Sirius and the Pleiades. A number of crossbred species involving Pleiadeans and humans from the past are involved. A number of hybrid species have been developed over thousands of years in order to take advantage of physical bodies in many opportunities for contact and assistance with humans.

All of this suggests that physicality is associated with a primitive state of consciousness, and very likely the majority of contact with humans on Earth has involved mental links with unseen ETs in other dimensions or aetheric planes. Yes, it is very complex, and most is yet to be learned and understood.

However, seen or unseen, what is an effective protocol for communications with the Visiting Others? The term Visiting Others was a gift from a Native American friend who had a lifetime of contact with assorted extraterrestrials, but mostly with the small Grays from Zeta Reticuli.

It is important to remember that disclosure has always been an option that the Visiting Others could exercise without any country being able to stop. That could be as dramatic as a daylight appearance at low altitude of a huge ET craft over Hong Kong or any other of the world's cities that are not likely to try to take offensive action against it. Alternatively, extraterrestrial controlled or influenced disclosure could be profoundly subtle and permanently transforming for all humans. Many believe that if the United States makes a disclosure announcement, it will be made with a dire- threat spin attached. The world deserves better.

A core part of a counterintelligence program in the United States has been extensive propaganda programs to dehumanise extraterrestrials. More than propaganda has been used. Some of these tactics include the abduction of citizens by personnel playing the role of extraterrestrials, who use crude mind-influencing technologies to create fearful scenarios for the helpless victims. Such extreme measures can only be understood in terms of shielding the truth that a few are desperate to hide. Great power and profit will be at risk when disclosure takes place.

Who are the Gatekeepers of Disclosure?

There is circumstantial evidence from Earth sources and confirming evidence from one ET source that President Dwight Eisenhower was involved in three meetings with extraterrestrials, the first meeting being in 1954. These meetings were organised by the Pleiadeans, and included a species from Tau Ceti and Nordic hybrids. The ET agenda was to demonstrate to President Eisenhower that a peaceful community of ETs existed, but that a group of international financiers and industrialists was controlling the exchange of technologies for profit and suppressing knowledge of technologies that would address the broader needs of humanity—for example, energy, food and health—in such a way that financial profit potential would be minimal.

Eisenhower attempted to establish a separate system of exchange, but that was thwarted by the international anti-disclosure cabal. On 17 January 1961, Eisenhower gave his final televised Address to the Nation from the White House. In his farewell speech, he warned that "we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence, whether sought or unsought, by the military-industrial complex". He said: "Only an alert and knowledgeable citizenry can compel the proper meshing of the huge industrial and military machinery of defense with our peaceful methods and goals, so that security and liberty may prosper together."

The last comment, that only an alert and knowledgeable citizenry can assure a balance of security and liberty, applies to the citizenry of every country.

The ETs selected the United States after the end of World War II as the most powerful and responsible country to lead the world into a mutually productive relationship with the Cosmic Community. The ETs were particularly concerned about the potential spread of weapons of mass destruction and the habit of the nation-state system to resort repeatedly to the use of violence to solve political problems.

Greed and corruption doomed the best efforts by President Eisenhower, and no subsequent presidents of either of the nation's principal political parties have dared to address the issue publicly.

Fifty years after Eisenhower's failed effort that could have resulted in formal disclosure, the world's geopolitical landscape has vastly changed. The US empire is still strong, but has been fully captured by the military-industrial complex, more accurately now identified as the military-industrial-congressional complex. Irrational wars of choice have greatly weakened the economy, and public support and respect for the Congress and the White House are at an all-time low. It is past time for another country to take the lead that the US was once offered by the ETs but failed to perform.

What Country is Ready to Lead?

I have a short list of countries that in my opinion could successfully provide the needed pre-disclosure leadership, and then the critical leadership of disclosure itself and leadership in the exciting post-disclosure years. The list is drawn from the group of nations which have successfully sent one or more satellites around the Moon and are well aware from their photography of the presence of artificially constructed structures in a variety of architectural styles. That list of countries includes the United States, Russia, countries of the European Space Agency (ESA), China, Japan and India. While I can make a case for each of the other countries—especially India, where I have met with government officials and the academic community on this subject—I will only address China in this leadership role.

The reason I identified the short list of countries that are well aware of the ET presence on the Moon is that we cannot waste any additional time debating evidence of the ET presence. The debate should be about what disclosure will mean to Earth and our future in the Cosmic Community.

China's First Global Reach

There is a very valuable historical example in China's past when it boldly discovered and then engaged the known world from a position of hegemony based upon its superior technological and intellectual attainments. The principal source for this relevant discourse is the outstanding research by Gavin Menzies and his colleagues. Their two books, 1421: The Year China Discovered the World and 1434: The Year a Magnificent Chinese Fleet Sailed to Italy and Ignited the Renaissance, are a successful challenge to the Eurocentric history that currently dominates in most university curricula.

China's objective was made clear in the imperial order of the Xuan De Emperor dated 29 June 1430: "The New Reign of Xuan De has commenced and everything shall begin anew. But distant lands beyond the seas have not yet been informed. I send Eunuchs Zheng He and Wang Zing Hong with this imperial order to instruct these countries to follow the way of heaven with reverence and to watch over their people so that all might enjoy the good fortune of lasting peace."

To facilitate this, Admiral and Ambassador Zheng He presented foreign rulers with the Xuan De calendar and with charts and navigational aids to enable them to return tribute to China. Menzies's research discovered that "[i]n the years immediately thereafter, a dozen countries paid tribute to the emperor, including an enormous delegation from Egypt".

However, there is another reasonable assessment of China's strategy and expectations. What Zheng He did is highly suggestive of an indigenous Native American potlatch ceremony practised by tribes of the Pacific Northwest Coast of Canada and the United States. The potlatch was a very important cultural practice wherein the sponsors of a potlatch gave away many useful items. In return, they earned prestige, enhanced reputation and validated rank. Prestige increased with the lavishness and the value of the goods given away.

The gifts of the treasure fleet were incredibly valuable. The Shoushi calendar contained a mass of astronomical data running to thousands of observations. This was revolutionary knowledge beyond anything the barbarians had been able to produce. Additionally, the Nong Shu, a popular encyclopaedia that included vivid descriptions and illustrations of agricultural machinery, was gifted. Another gift was a pocket encyclopaedia, the Wu-ching Tsung-yao. This was a collection of the most important military techniques, giving detailed accounts of the construction and functions of a vast array of military weaponry.

In summary, the triune category of gifts opened the world for new discovery, integration and cooperation. It greatly increased the potential of nations to achieve maximum agricultural efficiency, and finally challenged nations to consider the consequences when everyone would have the option for an inventory of the most advanced weapons of war.

However, there was one gift that deserves special attention. This was the massive encyclopaedia Yongle Dadian, which had been completed in 1421. Three thousand scholars had worked on it for years.

It compiled all Chinese knowledge from the previous 2,000 years. It covered every subject on the planet, including: geography and cartography, agriculture, civil and military engineering, warfare, health and medical care, building and town planning, steel and steel production, ceramics-firing and painting, biochemistry including cross-fertilisation, alcohol production, silk-making and weaving, gunpowder-making, ship construction, codes, cyphers and cryptography.

This global model of imperial boldness has no equal. Even the US Marshall Plan offered to Europe after the end of World War II, when the US was alone on the top of the totem pole of greatness, does not match it. And while the US is still powerful, its period of imperialism has entered a cycle of eclipse.

China's Second Coming: Disclosure's Opportunities and Challenges

I am ending the evening with an outline of actions that China may already be considering in terms of taking a lead in formal disclosure of Earth and extraterrestrial contact. China has consistently opposed the weaponisation of outer space in its official statements, and, along with Russia, has led the initiative to create an international treaty banning all weapons in space through negotiations within an ad hoc committee of the Conference on Disarmament.

“China has consistently opposed the weaponisation of outer space ... and along with Russia, has led the initiative to create an international treaty banning all weapons in space ...”

I gave a copy of a Treaty to ban space-based weapons to China's Ambassador in New Delhi, India, in April of last year. I provided it to him during a visit to India where I presented the Cosmic Humanity briefing at two academic venues and at the India International Centre in New Delhi. The Cosmic Humanity briefing was jointly created with Neil Freer, who opened the Mexo program last month. He and I look forward to presenting the Cosmic Humanity briefing in China, and invite you to assist to make that possible.

Details of the Outer Space Security and Development Treaty may be seen at www.peaceinspace.com/the-treaty. It may be read in many languages, including, of course, Chinese. The Treaty was created last year by a small group that, among others, includes Dr Carol Rosin, Dr Edgar D. Mitchell—astronaut and the sixth human from Earth to walk on the Moon—and myself.

A unique feather of the Treaty is that the invited Signatories to the Treaty are Nation States, Indigenous Nations and Cosmic Cultures. When China becomes a Signatory to the Treaty, it can expect to be joined by more than one Cosmic Culture with a demonstrated interest and capability to assure that space will be weapons free.

In December of last year, China announced a five-year plan for space exploration. It includes beginning the work to land its astronauts on the Moon. The complete success of all of China's current space plans and even bolder ones in the future would be assured if China led all nations of the world by announcing the reality of Earth and extraterrestrial contact, and its desire to work directly with ETs in its peaceful space program.

The ET cultures that I expect would quickly respond to this request for open support would be other than those that have been working with the United States in secretly developing space and other technologies that have not been made available for peaceful use for all of Earth's humanity. This would certainly be a shock to the world, and particularly disappointing to the US military-industrial complex that has profited so much in secrecy.

There is a signature move that China could take that would be as bold and significant as was done by opening the sea routes of the world in 1434 and sharing knowledge that transformed the world. This would be to direct their university system to research and write a series of white papers on the consequences to China and the world of disclosure of Earth-ET contact and cooperation. This most helpful pre-disclosure step would begin to prepare the world for events that will end up with Earth taking its rightful place in the Cosmic Community.

An additional helpful step for China to take would be to search their most ancient archives to look for references to past extraterrestrial contact with China. As mentioned earlier, we have an abundance of archaeological evidence of thousands of years of ET contact in South Africa and in the Middle East. These were the Anunnaki, and we know that they moved east into what is now India and Pakistan, and west into what is now Mexico and Central America. Did they also move into what is now China? Or perhaps another extraterrestrial culture was there, nurturing civilisation. If so, who were they? These would be the "gods" of your most ancient legends, but, more importantly, your ancestors.

One additional, highly important scientific involvement demonstrates that China has an independent capability to determine the timing and level of risk from the return of Planet X, Nibiru. Now inbound and close in on its 3,600-year elliptical orbit around the Sun, the potential consequences of its passage through the inner planets has the global astronomical community on alert.

Anticipating this event, Lifan Wang, director of the Chinese Center for Antarctic Astronomy, in June 2004 initiated the program that resulted in the establishment of a remote observatory at Dome A on the Antarctic Plateau. This observatory has the best clear view of the approaching planet, Nibiru. I have been in contact with Professor Lifan Wang about this undertaking. More important would be Chinese contact with the Ancestors to request their assistance to assure Earth's survival of Nibiru's passage.

A Postscript: What Do You Say After "Hello"?

Names, titles and labels are important, and there is a universal tradition of using terms to demean or diminish those whom we fear or do not know or consider being a threat.

The most commonly used term for extraterrestrials is "aliens". The very popular American Heritage Dictionary gives five uses of the word, including "a member of another family, people, region or country". A second usage is "an outsider".

“One additional, highly important scientific involvement demonstrates that China has an independent capability to determine the timing and level of risk from the return of Planet X, Nibiru.”

A third usage may surprise you: "a creature from outer space". In fact, "creature" was used as a direct reference to extraterrestrials in the "Proposed Studies on the Implications of Peaceful Space Activities for Human Affairs", often referred to as "the Brookings Report". This famous report was commissioned by NASA and created by the Brookings Institution. Hundreds of scholars were consulted, including two very famous US anthropologists: Professor Cora DuBois, Department of Anthropology, Harvard University, and Margaret Mead, Associate Curator of Ethnology, American Museum of Natural History.

The point is this. The term "extraterrestrial" is self-defining: "originating, located or occurring outside the Earth or its atmosphere". Earth humans would be extraterrestrials to citizens of Mars, and both would be something created (creatures) and humans of their home planet.

I have used the term "Visiting Others" because to me it has a respectful connotation. Perhaps "the Ancestors" would be both more accurate and certainly respectful. To forget or not recognise one's ancestors is to be a brook without a source, a tree without root.

The Visiting Others, the Ancestors, are more than time travellers: they have learned to control time; it is one of their most valuable tools. They can move any direction in time. If they think this meeting is important to them, they are here from the past, the present and the future. To them, the Vault of Time has been opened for millennia.

This, too, is our future. If that is what you want, let us work together to achieve it. ∞

About the Author:

Cecil B. Scott Jones, PhD, is founder and president of the Peace and Emergency Action Coalition for Earth (PEACE). The principal function of PEACE is to oversee the development of the global Center for Sustainable Peace and Development system. Previous to this, he was co-founder and president of the Human Potential Foundation. Established in 1989, it conducted research into all conditions of humankind—physiological, psychological and spiritual—to assist the individual to achieve the highest levels of human potential in body, mind and spirit in order to compete and cooperate with personal excellence throughout life.

Prior to this position, Dr Jones was Special Assistant to Senator Claiborne Pell from January 1985 until March 1991. Retiring as a Commander in the US Navy, he spent approximately half of his 30-year naval career in intelligence service overseas and in the United States. In post-Navy careers he has taught at university level and worked in the private sector research and development community involved in US government-sponsored projects for the Defense Nuclear Agency, Defense Intelligence Agency, US Army Intelligence and Security Command, and other organisations.

The Treaty Introduction:

"The Outer Space Security and Development Treaty of 2012 establishes a framework and procedures to assure that space will be a neutral realm from which all classes of weapons are banned and from which no hostile action shall be taken towards Earth or the surrounding Cosmos.

"This Treaty invites Nation States to become Signatories to this Treaty and invites Parties, including Nation States, Indigenous Nations, and Cosmic Cultures, to commit to plan and assist in the orderly development and implementation of a framework and procedures that will assure and verify that space is and will remain a neutral realm from which all classes of space-based weapons are banned in perpetuity.

"This Treaty will put a lid on the war industry and mindset while allowing it to be transformed. It recognizes that information and data gained and shared from cooperative space exploration and development will provide unlimited benefits and opportunities to all humankind in areas of health, education, the economy, mutual security, energy, and the environment...as wars end. It acknowledges that we are not alone in the universes, that there are Cosmic Cultures that will be important allies for our security and development, and that our national and international policies must reflect this reality."
